covered half of the states, Hughes had the necessary 494. New Jersey's vote tipped the scale.Senator Lodge made an eloquent appeal for Hughes, in seconding the motion for unanimity."He should have the cordial support of every man who honestly believes that another four years of the present administration would be a calamity to the people of the United States, because of its disintegrating public sentiment, lowering American spirit, and failing to stand for the conscience and soul of the American people."The delegates then voted to nominate Justice Hughes. The nomination of Justice Hughes was made unanimously.The chairman asked if the nomination should be made unanimously, he recognized A. P. Moore of Pennsylvania, who moved it be so.Colorado yielded to Pennsylvania and John Wamamaker placed Fairbanks in nomination.Governor Willis of Ohio seconded Fairbanks. This practically assured Fairbanks' nomination, and the convention cheered.California lead off the balloting

secretary, appeared on the platform

New York delegation conferred on the floor on the way in, whether they should withdraw Roosevelt's name and

Roosevelt was received by Perkins at the progressive convention, and by Senator Smoot to the republican con-

sive party:
"Gentlemen: I understand that this morning you are to have your last conference with conferees of the republican national convention, that they have repeatedly asked you to present for their consideration, a second choice, but that your committee has not seen its way clear to do this.
For months I have thought of this matter, and for the last few weeks it has been the chief thing of which I have thought, as I feel with all my heart that it is the imperative duty of all of us, who wish to see our country restored to the position she should hold, to seek a common effort to save our nation, and if by any possibility we can find a common standing ground.""The day before yesterday in my telegram to Senator Jackson, I said:
"Gentlemen, we are forgetting past differences now, join for the safety and honor of our country, to enforce the policies of genuine Americanism, and to save our country." Surely we can afford to act in accordance with words of Abraham Lincoln when he said:
"May not all, having a common interest, reunite in a common effort to save our country?" May we ask those who have not differed with us to join in this same spirit toward those who have?"Theodore Roosevelt.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—Justice Hughes, when told of his nomination for presidency by newspapermen at his home, where he has been at work all during the republican convention, returned to his study and down Monday, probably his last day
as justice of the supreme court, received the news without evidence of emotion, saying, "I have nothing to say at this time, but will make a statement later in the day."The justice's secretary announced a written statement would be issued at three o'clock."Now, gentlemen," said he, after he had thanked them for their congratulations, "All I know about this is what you tell me, but if you are interested you may return at three when I probably will have a statement for you."Certain to Accept.
Although no one could speak with authority, Hughes' friends considered it certain that he would accept, regardless of whether the Progressives kept a third ticket in the field.The news came while Justice Hughes was eating lunch with Mrs.
Hughes and their two daughters, Miss Katherine and Miss Elizabeth.The justice at once responded to the request to be received by newspapermen. He said he would have something to say later.Within fifteen minutes, a telegram came from Senator Harding, chairman of the convention, formally announcing his nomination. Justice Hughes began writing a reply.While the reply was being dictated several unsuccessful efforts were made to get the Justice on the telephone by impatient friends in Chicago.
Mr. Green said the reply would be finished in a few minutes, and would be telegraphed before any statement was issued in Washington.Cheered in Congress.
Representative Mann, the Republi-

Hughes amid lusty cheering from the London, June 10.—The German warship Pommern, which was sunk in the battle off Jutland, was not the battleship of that name but recently completed battle cruiser, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company, quoting a sea captain who is a frequent visitor to German ports. The battleship, which was completed in 1905, was torpedoed in the battle in July, 1915, according to the captain.Admiralty officials here have expressed their belief that the representative of the Associated Press that the Pommern which was sunk in the great naval battle was a new battleship.They point out that the commander of a British submarine reported he had torpedoed the old battleship Pommern in July, 1915, and this report, they believe, was confirmed by survivors of the battleship who were landed wearing her capband.The sinking of the German battleship in the Baltic sea by a British submarine was officially announced in the house of commons on July 21, 1915. It was stated at the time the ship was believed to have been the Pommern, but this was promptly denied by the German government. Following the Jutland battle the German admiralty issued a statement denying the Pommern sunk was a new ship.Admit Loss.

the Derfflinger was believed to have

JOHNSON FOR SECOND

California Man for Vice-President—
Colonel's Suggestion of Senator Lodge As Compromise Can-

Chicago, Auditorium, 3:25 P. M., June 10.—Colonel Roosevelt has advised Governor Johnson and other leading Progressives that for the present he will hold in abeyance his decision as to acceptance of the nomination of the Progressive party for president.
Mr. Roosevelt, it was understood was preparing a statement at Oyster Bay which would be given out later during the afternoon.Auditorium, Chicago, June 10.—At the very moment when it was flashed to the progressive convention that Hughes had been nominated at the Coliseum as the standard bearer of the republican party, Chairman Robbins of the progressives was announcing that Roosevelt had been unanimously nominated as the progressive leader. The convention went wild and there was no way to inform the delegates what had transpired at the Coliseum. For several minutes Chairman Robbins wrapped for order.Five minutes passed before order was restored and James R. Garfield of Ohio, without telling the delegates
Hughes had been named at the Coliseum, asked for a recess to 3 p. m.,
after the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."No. 10. The delegates, he said, believed that Roosevelt had been nominated, and finally the delegates yielded and began to file out at 12:42 to return at 3 o'clock.Johnson Vice President.
Before this action was taken, Mr.
Robbins had mentioned the necessity of nominating a vice president."Johnson" is the man who is about that came from the floor, showing the desire of the party was almost unanimous for their 1912 standard bearers—
Colonel Roosevelt of New York and Governor Hiram Johnson of California.Governor Johnson declared after the recess he and other leaders could communicate with Roosevelt during the recess, and insist upon a definite statement as to whether he would accept.The delegates should be advised before the convention adjourns, just what the progressive party intends to do. The delegates should not be held in suspense in this critical time."The conference of progressive state chairmen adjourned at 11:09 a. m., after voting to request the progressive convention to delay further action until the republican convention has an opportunity to consider a suggestion made by Roosevelt, and support Henry Cabot Lodge, he considered as a compromise presidential candidate. A minority of the conference insisted that the progressive convention nominate a vice president."We want this convention to name Roosevelt before the Republicans get the chance," said Col. R. A. Wilkinson, of Minnesota, as the progressives sloganeered the nomination.Bainbridge Colby, was selected to place Roosevelt in nomination. At ten forty one a. m. the convention
came to order at the call of Chairman Robbins. He arose and the delegates cheered by announcing that "We are going to do just what we came to Chicago to do, instructions to delegates on how to make a nomination unanimously. The delegates were given from the rostrum by Secretary
Davis.Without Roll Call.
After explanation of the parliamentary situation, it was decided that the nomination would be made without a roll call. Answering demands for the immediate nomination of Col.
Roosevelt, Chairman Robbins said the convention would not proceed to adopt the platform or make nominations without giving the resolutions committee a reasonable time to report."The peace conferees reached the

 (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
 Clinton, June 10.—Employees of the Northwestern road found the body of Ed. Johnson, a farm hand, lying alongside the tracks of the Northwestern road near the depot platform about three this morning. Johnson arrived from Beloit at five twenty-five Friday evening, and had evidently been sleeping too much. He was not noticed after that and it is not known what train hit him or how he met his death. He was thirty, unmarried, and worked for H. W. Bunker, who resides a mile from the village.

FRANCE IS SUFFERING FROM HIGH OCEAN FREIGHT RATES THAT NOW PREVAIL

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
 Paris, June 10.—While France suffers from the extraordinary ocean freight rates now prevailing, her shipping owners reap little or none of the profits. Dividends of French navigation companies—such as declared dividends—ran from six to fifteen per cent while British, Dutch and Scandinavian companies distributed from eight to one hundred per cent among their share holders.
 One English company declared a dividend of one hundred six per cent, fifty per cent, one forty nine per cent, seven from twenty five to forty per cent and twenty nine companies' dividends ran from ten to twenty per cent. Two Dutch companies divided one hundred per cent, two fifty per cent and two twenty five per cent. The comparatively poor showing of the French merchant fleet is explained partly by the considerable requisitions made by the government and other war disturbances that did not affect neutral countries and were felt far less proportionately in England and where British owners continued to profit from outgoing freight which the French fleet always lacked. Economic writers call the attention of the Superior Merchant Marine Council now in session to the fact that French lines have also suffered from obstructive administration measures and call for reforms that have been under discussion for years, particularly concerning the regime of French ports, methods of recruiting French sailors, and better interior transportation to furnish a better outlet for freight brought to port in French bottoms.

JANESVILLE-BELOIT CEMENT ROAD URGED

A. C. Powers of Town of Beloit Believes County Highways Should Be Built More Permanently.
 A cement highway connecting Janesville and Beloit, is urged by A. C. Powers of the town of Beloit, a former member of the Rock county board of supervisors, who was in Janesville a few days ago. Mr. Powers is planning a trip to Milwaukee county, where there has been considerable cement pavement laid during the past two years for the purpose of looking into the cost and durability of this type of road work.
 Mr. Powers believes that the present type of macadam highways which are being built in Rock county are not what they should be to stand the ever increasing traffic. No sooner are they built than it is necessary to begin the repair work.
 Cement pavements would be a solution which would give permanent roads at an expense of about three times as much as the cost of building the present highways.
 "I believe that the county should be bonded for an amount which would allow a large amount of cement pavement to be laid at one time, would reduce the cost and would give a chance to build long stretches of permanent highways," said Mr. Powers. "I favor an eighteen foot wide pavement curb and instead of a gravel shoulder. I also believe that building property should be made to stand a larger proportionate cost."
 Mr. Powers was largely instrumental in the establishment of the old county aid system of road building, which was so successfully applied in Rock county before the state aid system was adopted.

JANESVILLE RED SOX WILL PLAY A YOST'S PARK SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Sunday afternoon the fast Janesville Red Sox will play the Merchants in a game to be played at Yost's park. The local nine expect a hard game as the Rockford team is considered the best amateur players in that city and they have defeated the A. A. C's. of Beloit, the team that won from the Red Sox last Sunday by a score of 3 to 2.
 For the game tomorrow they have Frank McGinley, the third sacker, who has been absent from the lineup for some time. Another twirler has been found in a Chilson of this city, who has had much experience in this position. The lineup that will line up against the Rockford men will be as follows: C. Spohn and Jackson, c.; Hill, 2b; Jackson, ss; Miller, 1b; Kakuske, lf; Viney, rf; Sullivan, cf; and Howland will also be in the lineup.

HOLLAND PREPARES TO DEFEND NATION

New Military System of Little Nation Gives United States an Example of What to Do.
 The Hague, Netherlands, June 10.—An army of 1,300,000 men as Holland's military strength in any future European struggle is the preparedness program of the "Volksweerbareid" or National Defense Association, which gathers a club subscriber with 140 branches and nearly 14,000 members.

Under this program every able-bodied man and woman would be enlisted for the country's defense; there would be universal service instead of the limited compulsory system which now obtains. The association is convinced that freedom and independence can be assured only when all who are able, conscious of their duty, prepare themselves in service in the country's defense forces, with a view in case of necessity, to being able to defend their most sacred possessions of the nation.

Compulsory Training.
 The concrete scheme of the association, taken from the general compulsory training of the Netherlands, is that of a powerful defense must be the forming of a powerful army, the program would provide physical exercise in the schools, and subsequent preparatory training of the youth of the country. This the line spent in the ranks would be comparatively short, the association argues, citing what has been seen in that respect in the present war.

Only a few of the large levies thus obtained would suffice to form a field army. "Hence the men would pass out into the 'local troops'—territorial troops. These latter would be so organized that they would be strong localized frontier and coast guards, they could be ready to take the field in a few hours.
 The "local troops" would, in the first place, serve for defense of the first place would be destined for offensive operations. The two together would form a force of about 800,000 men, trained, while there would be a reserve of 500,000 men, making up the total of 1,300,000 mentioned.
 Summarized, this new national army would be constituted as follows:
 Frontier and coastal troops, 154,000 men; field army, 107,000; position troops, 15,000; marine, 5,000; local troops, 334,500; total, 795,500 men.
 Reserve: Local reserve, first ban, 400,000 men; second ban, 170,000 men; total, 570,000 men.

Guard the Frontiers.
 With such an army, which is represented as being as flexible, the old axiomatic principle of "water line" might be abandoned and positions taken up immediately behind the frontiers, the association points out.

The basic idea of the program is said to enjoy wide sympathy and support, and the plan is expected to come forth for serious consideration in one form or another when the present crisis is past.
 In a talk with a correspondent of the Associated Press the secretary of the association laid special stress on the fact that the women must also be organized and trained to co-operate, presumably largely in Red Cross work.

Report from its propaganda activities, the National Defense association has been instrumental in raising nearly 10,000 volunteer Landstorm troops to force the mobilized army.
 Since the organization has provided extensive facilities for rifle practice and the acquisition of other military arts, further gymnasium and athletic clubs, trained women for first aid work, and founded summer training camps.

BREMEN COTTON MARKET WILL BE A COMPETITOR OF ROTTERDAM AFTER WAR

Rotterdam, Netherlands, June 10.—The Bremen cotton market is promised a serious competitor in Rotterdam after the war as a result of the decision to establish a cotton exchange here. The enormous extent of Rotterdam's transit trade in cotton at the opening of the war, in consequence of the reverence of Bremen's maritime communications, opened the eyes of Dutchmen to the potentialities of the position. Last spring the Twenty (Eastern Holland) chambers of commerce invited the Rotterdam chamber to take the initiative in the matter, promising the support of all the spinners, and the establishment of a cotton market is now assured by the formation of a cotton corporation and an association for trade in cotton.

Several important factors favor the new venture's success. There are some fourteen spinning manufacturers in Holland itself with an annual consumption of about 100,000 bales of cotton. Moreover, Belgium and a great part of western Germany can be reached by railroad to say nothing of the Dutch port's fine water communications—at less cost from Rotterdam than from Bremen. A comparison of railroad rates shows that Gladbach, Rheidt, Gronau, Bocholt, Cologne and other important centers (Bremen's position, while Bremen firms have the advantage of a direct line east in many German spinning centers. Nevertheless, Rotterdam has high hopes of the more than recovering its lost cotton trade of forty years ago.

G. O. P. CONVENTION HAD VERY BUSY DAY

FAVORITE SONS GIVEN INNING
BY TALENTED SPEAKERS WHO THRILLED
AUDIENCE.

EXCITEMENT INTENSE

On Program of the Day—Nine Hours
and a Half Spent in Deliberations.
Without Any Decision Being Reached.

By Staff Correspondent.
Chicago, Ill., June 10.—Wisconsin is sadly out of tune with the rest of the states of the Union that claim to be Republican strongholds. This fact has been evidenced the past two days by the action, not only of the delegates at the G. O. P. convention but by the gallery and audience that packed the hall to the very top gallery, first on Thursday when Edwin J. Gross of Milwaukee, a Wisconsin La Follette delegate, presented La Follette's platform as the minority report of the platform committee, and again on Friday when Michael E. Olbrich, also a La Follette delegate, placed the name of his political sponsor in nomination.
On both occasions it took all the power the chairman had to compel the assembly to give even a semblance of attention to the remarks of the two young men and both were greeted with catcalls, hisses, and other signs of disapproval while they occupied the platform. No matter what the political views of a Wisconsin man or woman in that big convention hall have been, they felt keenly the disgrace the crowds thrust at the state by their action. If they did not approve of Mr. Gross' platform or Olbrich's candidate for presidential honors, they should at least have given both a courteous treatment, while they did not.

Friday's session was a long drawn out affair. For windjamming some of those orators who announced the candidate of their favorite sons should receive special medals. Then the supposedly spontaneous enthusiasm of the delegates when their candidate's name was mentioned at last and they rushed the hall with their yelling like bears and Comanche Indians, really became the nine hours were passed and the convention really adjourned.

The chief feature of the forenoon session was a spontaneous and hearty and prolonged demonstration in Governor Whitman, New York, while making the nominating speech for Howard Taft. Instantly the name of the delegates and many visitors were on their feet cheering and shouting. The band joined in the ovation to the last republican president and the demonstration increased in volume. It was a strong and heartfelt tribute.

Governor C. S. Whitman of New York led off in the nominating speech
by presenting the name of Hughes.
He made a neat speech but lacked power
of voice and was not heard distinctly.
Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, in a scholar and profound address placed the name of Elihu Root in nomination.
Then came Senator Henry Cabot
Lodge of Massachusetts and in a truly
Harvard dramatic talk, nominated
John W. Weeks.

The great speech of the afternoon was that of Governor Frank B. Willis of Ohio, who nominated Theodore E.
Burton. Willis gave one of those sort of addresses that sounded well, rang true and did not mince matters. His voice carried to the farthest ends of the hall and the delegates again. W. J. Calhoun of Illinois then followed to nominate L. V. Sherman.
He had no voice, and even those in the front seats could hardly hear him.
A young man named Miller placed DuPont in nomination. The delegates and crowd were becoming tired and did not give him the attention they should. Congressman Will L. Wood of Indiana then nominated Frank and amid enthusiastic greeting eulogized his candidate to the skies. Kendall of Iowa then nominated Albert B. Cummings, with lots of eulogistic praise.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The president of one of the largest banks of New York City told the writer that after he had served for several years as an officer in the bank over which he now presides, the then president called him into his office one day and said, "I want you to come into my office and be with me." The young man replied, "But what do you want me to do?" "Never mind that," said the president; "you will learn about that soon. I just want you to be with me." "That was the most memorable moment of my life," said the great banker. "Being with that man made me all that I am today."

Cyril Bailey, a popular tutor at Oxford, was asked his object as a teacher of English schoolboys. He answered thoughtfully: "I don't know that I have any object. I just like to be with these students. I get a whole lot from being with them. I hope that they get something from being with me."

Did you ever think of what it means simply to be with the right kind of people? No one is useless, according to Robert Louis Stevenson, so long as he has a friend. Try to imagine what the disciples received by being with Jesus. Are you in the joyous sorrow, and depend upon us to share their joys? A famous man once wrote to a man in trouble: "I thought you considered me your friend. And you have not asked me to share your sorrow. I could at least come and be near you in your trial."—The Christian Herald.

Every intelligent dog shows a disposition to be on good terms with everybody, yet he has but few intimate friends. If he is a bird dog, his affection is lavished on the man who shoots over him in the field and shares his mid-day lunch on the bank of a stream. The sight of a gun in the hands of his master causes his eyes to sparkle with pleasure, and his voice rings out in joyful acclaim, in anticipation of the day's sport.

While the love and friendship of a dog may not be human, it is so closely akin to it that it puts to blush many imitations on the part of men and women whose sincerity is not above question. The love of a dog is always genuine. He submits without argument to all kinds of treatment and his dumb reasoning never causes him to lose faith.

There is an object lesson in this kind of friendship, which is worth studying, for the friendships of life are sacred and not always appreciated. The thing which is so often for love sometimes lacks the ring of sincerity because the impulse back of it was not born in friendship.

In every happy home the wife is a friend as well as a sweetheart, and the husband a comrade as well as a lover. There's a wonderful difference between the two. The friend and comrade is a stayer through all the vicissitudes of changing fortune. The bond of sympathy and not a creature of impulse and the helping hand is always cheerfully extended.

The lover and sweetheart may or may not be sincere. The lack of knowledge, which often exists, make of wedded life a lottery, and time alone tells the story. The friend is in sympathy with us. He likes what we like and enjoys what we enjoy. The lover may be influenced by other motives that do not always bear investigation.

There is nothing incompatible about friendship, and the element of selfishness does not enter into it. The thing which draws two people together, and unites them in the bonds of friendship, is not sentiment, and there is very little impulse about it. It is harmony of mind, and of tastes, of desires and ambitions, and a disposition to give and take, which many homes could adopt to advantage.

The man who don't know the Star Spangled Banner from the doxology, finds it difficult to go through life comfortably with a wife aspires to the opera, and who makes a better showing at the piano than in the kitchen.

pledged to hunt up some boy who needed a friend, and become a big brother to him. They had no trouble in finding boys because every community is full of them.

There are some things about family life which are difficult to understand. It is an old saying that the ties of blood are stronger than water, but it is not always true. There are too many homes where the brothers are not even friends, and where they drift apart as soon as the home ties are severed, and lose all interest in each other's welfare.

Aside from the mother, on whose love and loyalty the boy always relies, the father should be the boy's staunchest friend, but it too often happens that they are strangers in fact as well as in name. The boy loses respect for his father and refers to him as the "old man," and the father thinks of the boy as the most troublesome member of the family.

Where these conditions prevail—and they are not rare—it is seldom the fault of the boy, for there is no friendship which he prizes so highly as the friendship of his father. Give him a little responsibility, make a confidant of him, and note how quickly he responds.

The reason why the Boy Scout movement is so successful is because big-hearted men are at the head of it. They get close to the boy and keep close to him through the years when he needs a friend, which the home does not always supply. Here is a little story from real life, published in the last issue of Scouting, which reveals the secret.

"Joe Maybrick was a driver-boy working at the five-foot vein at Cayuga Mines. He was a beautiful boy, with large black eyes and curly hair of the same color. I made some inquiries about him, and found that his father was a heavy drinker, who had abandoned his mother. The family lived in an abject poverty at Brisban Patch—a group of 'company houses' near the mines of that name. The father, John Maybrick, spent the bigger part of his own and the boy's wages at Mike Moran's saloon, down at the lower corner of the street. Joe was compelled to carry the beer for his father from the saloon to the home. I found also that Joe had never been to church, had never been christened, that he could 'cuss' like a trooper, smoke cigarettes like a fiend, fight like a dog, swim like a fish, climb like a squirrel, run like a deer and work hard all day in the mines.

"Wednesday evening came; so did Joe. I was sitting at my desk; he stood in the doorway—barefooted, bareheaded, with a baseball bat in his hand. I told him to come in and sit on my chair by my side.

"Joe," I said to him, 'you want to be a boy scout?'

"Yes," he snapped.

"Do you know what that means? You must stop carrying beer for your dad; you must stop smoking cigarettes; you must stop 'cussing'; you must be manly and brave—a true American."

"I told him to come to our headquarters the following night. I kept Joe by my side. I watched him closely. Not one word came from his lips, but the struggle within was a tempest of mixed emotions, and all were reflected plainly on his face. The meeting closed and all the scouts went home.

"Well, Joe became a member of the Troop; he was one of the quickest boys to learn I ever knew. In six months, he became a second class scout; in one year a first class scout; in two years a life and star scout.

"In the meantime he had become a member of the Welsh Congregational church, also a member of my Sunday school class. He managed to work a change in his father, who is now one of the best church members in town. He took a two year course to educate himself, and is now a C. A. He expelled all others in the scout examinations.

"I have good scouts in my troop, but Joe excelled all of them and became their leader in everything. Many a time I left the troop in his charge.

"On Friday, July 18, 1915, I was making my rounds at the Cayuga Mines. I was in the fifth vein, when Joe Gilbert, a runner, ran toward me and breathlessly exclaimed: 'One of our scouts has been hurt on S Gangway.'

"I hurried to the place. A fall of roof had buried Joe Maybrick and his mule, completely covering them. I got the miner to clean the heavy rock away, and there lay my scout. His body was horribly crushed but he was conscious, and his eyes were open. He looked at me as I laid him on the ground of the gangway.

"Joe," I said, 'You are going to die.'

"A smile played a moment on his pale lips. He formed his blackened hand for the scout salute, and tried to raise it to his forehead; then he whispered: 'Mr. Bowen—Scoutmaster—I am—Prepared.'

"A few hours later Joe was with the Father of all scouts. But his influence is still strong in the troop, in the mines and in the community."

The asparagus tip salesman in room 1107 tossed in vexation and viciously hit the bolster.

"I wish I could think of some way of giving poison to the fellow that's making that infernal racket upstairs," he muttered.

"Bump! Tat tat tat bump! The artificial toe manufacturer in room 1120 sat up in bed and, forgetting in his haste that he was quite bald, tore wildly at his hair.

HANDFUL OF BRITISH DEFEATED THE TURKS

British Expedition Force Drive On Turkish Force Six Times as Great as Their Number in Egyptian Battle.

London, July 10.—The defense by the British at the Egyptian desert post at El-Dueidar during the Turkish raid of April 23 deserves to be chronicled as among the memorable incidents of the war, according to Reuter's special correspondent at the general headquarters of the Egyptian expeditionary force. On that Sunday, 150 British soldiers held a position far too exposed for such a small garrison against a force of Turks and Arabs six times their own number, says the correspondent.

The location of defense is a small oasis in a depression in the sandy waste about thirteen miles east of the Suez Canal. The British had erected two redoubts and several small isolated posts in the vicinity of a grove of date palms. These defenses were not completed at the time of the raid.

In a mist so thick that the defenders were barely able to discern the barbed wire fifty feet in advance of their redoubts, the attack began at 9 o'clock in the morning. Rifle fire east back the first assault very quickly, according to the correspondent, the Turks retiring to reform.

Robert's in Command.
Capt. Robert of the Royal Scots Fusiliers was in command. In the absence of communication trenches, he was unable, after the mist lifted at 9 o'clock, to send reinforcements, and the British were left to fight on their own.

The attacking force numbered 120 Turkish camel corps and about 750 Arabs, together with two mountain guns and 50 artillerymen. The British, after holding their positions throughout the day, resisted the final and most desperate attack which began at 7 o'clock at night. This assault consisted of three rushes. When it had been beaten off, most of the enemy dead were found within fifty yards of the British trench, one Turk being found within twenty yards. The defenders had suffered a great many casualties.

Ald Finally Arrives.
Meanwhile news of the attack had reached British headquarters, seven miles away, and two companies of infantry had been sent to the garrison, which they reached about 9 o'clock after a trying march through deep sand. The officer commanding these fresh troops had orders to take the offensive at the first opportunity and drive off the enemy but he found that the latter was too strong, and further reinforcements were desperately needed.

While two squadrons of Australian Light Horse hurried up from a place eighteen miles away.

Before the arrival of these latter reinforcements, however, the Turks and Arabs began to fall back, and a British counter-attack drove off the rear guard, twelve of the enemy being captured. The Australian Light Horse assisted in the full retreat but were unable to overtake the camels on which the enemy was mounted.

The Turks and Arabs lost 70 dead, one wounded and 31 prisoners, according to the correspondent, who does not state the British casualties. The latter included Capt. A. C. A. Braco of the Army Service Corps, the only officer of the original garrison killed, and Lieut. Crawford, who was rescued while trying to rescue Lieut. Crawford, who was lying on the sand, exposed to a deadly fire.

VALUE OF WAR HELMETS IS PROVED TO ENGLAND
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, June 10.—The value of the helmets which are now being supplied to the British troops at the front is indicated in an article in the current issue of the British Medical Journal which says that in a big fight where the Britishers were wearing the new helmets the number of penetrating gunshot wounds of the head was equal to less than one half per cent and the total number of fractures of the skull was under one per cent of all injuries.

Head wounds have been set down, upon the experience of recent wars, as accounting for fifteen per cent of all casualties, and the latest data show that, in trench fights at least, the percentage is as high as twenty-five.

"The British Helmet," the Journal explains, "protects the side and back of the neck and the temples and the upper part of the face as well, of course, as the top and sides of the head. It has also a smooth round top. It stands away from the head about one third of an inch all around, the weight being borne by a padded leather band fixed to the inner side of the surrounding steel by a series of india rubber buffers, each about the thickness of a lead pencil, and about one inch long. This detail of construction constitutes perhaps the most important difference between the British and French helmets. The buffers are capable of diffusing and neutralizing the force of a blow, which, falling on the closely fitted French helmet, would be conducted direct to the brain-pan."

The specific gravity of oil may be ascertained by taking a glass vessel and weighing it; then weigh into it one ounce of water and mark the point where the water reaches; then fill to this mark with oil and weigh it. ONE OF THE MOST NEGLECTED ARTICLES IN THE HOME IS THE REFRIGERATOR

Many people will spend money lavishly in building or furnishing their home and overlook the REFRIGERATOR almost entirely—and yet it is a mighty important home necessity.

THE AIM IN REFRIGERATION IS THE PROPER KEEPING OF FOOD—NOT ICE.

No raw food can be said to be pure when it comes into the home. Practically everything in the food line contains germ life. These bacteria may be perfectly harmless—they may be dangerous. But one thing is certain, if placed in the right kind of a refrigerator and kept cold there is less likelihood of these germs multiplying. It therefore becomes the duty of each one of us, ESPECIALLY MOTHERS AND FATHERS, to make sure the food we eat and give children to eat is so kept in the home that the germs it brings in do not multiply and increase to such an extent that only a very strong constitution can withstand the attack.

THINK ABOUT THESE FACTS AND ACT.

TALK TO LOWELL

ONE OF THE MOST NEGLECTED ARTICLES IN THE HOME IS THE REFRIGERATOR

Many people will spend money lavishly in building or furnishing their home and overlook the REFRIGERATOR almost entirely—and yet it is a mighty important home necessity.

THE AIM IN REFRIGERATION IS THE PROPER KEEPING OF FOOD—NOT ICE.

No raw food can be said to be pure when it comes into the home. Practically everything in the food line contains germ life. These bacteria may be perfectly harmless—they may be dangerous. But one thing is certain, if placed in the right kind of a refrigerator and kept cold there is less likelihood of these germs multiplying. It therefore becomes the duty of each one of us, ESPECIALLY MOTHERS AND FATHERS, to make sure the food we eat and give children to eat is so kept in the home that the germs it brings in do not multiply and increase to such an extent that only a very strong constitution can withstand the attack.

THINK ABOUT THESE FACTS AND ACT.

ONE MONTH'S ICE FREE WITH EACH NEW REFRIGERATOR PURCHASED FROM ANY OF THESE THREE DEALERS:

WORSE CONDITIONS FOR A BIG CIRCUS ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE

Experience of Old Timers With Barnes Shows Here Yesterday

Trying in the Extreme.

It was close to six o'clock this morning when the last section of the Milwaukee circus train left Janesville. Behind the long delay in getting on the road old circus men with the spectacle relate the visit here as one of the most trying in their experiences of years.

The first trouble met really rested on Beloit. Arriving here yesterday morning, the circus was short of fifty men due to wage overtures offered by a Lane City manufacturing plant. This morning the night before at Beloit and incidentally the trains late into Janesville, and in part due to one of the causes of the parade having to be abandoned.

The Milwaukee street hill proved a handicap and many a horse was consumed in negotiating the steep rise with the heavy equipment. Although any other circus in the world, the big trucks in few instances were able to make the hill and relays of horses were resorted to in addition to the motors.

The wet and three-day consistent rain-soaked grounds at the fair grounds were enough to turn the heart of an Arkansas traveler. Twenty teams of horses and three elephants were common in the movement of the bigger wagons across the race tracks. Early this morning when seat equipment was being moved it was necessary to use thirty-two horses and three elephants to move the wagon. Even then the distance covered was but three feet at a time and the animals were given an opportunity to rest.

The Barnes people lost a valuable horse here, a blood vessel bursting as the beast was straining every muscle to pull a wagon through the deep mud. It was taken to a corner of the street and the head and limbs cut off after the body was skinned and disemboweled. The flesh meat will be used to feed the stock animals, the cost of beef and other meat being more expensive than the circus has been purchasing old horses and killing them as needed.

The labor problem reached such a stage following the performance last evening that Mr. Barnes, who travels with his show, sent out an S. O. S. call to all laborers, including the women. With one accord and spirit they few other circuses could present the women entered into the work with as much enthusiasm as the men.

Miss Mabel Stark, the lady who did the thriller with the Nubian, and the aviating pedestal which was elevated to the top to be bombarded with a pair of men's trousers and an old coat. Other lights were similarly bedecked and worked hand in hand with the meager employ of the company.

Dr. W. A. Funn, Harry O. Nowlan and Charlie Funn, the Funn family, stayed on the grounds until four o'clock this morning, the time the wagon left. Edward Parker and W. N. K. stayed on until midnight.

Mr. Barnes was enthusiastic in the treatment he has received here and expressed himself as sorry for being in Janesville. He had a better showing, it is known, however, than had in weather been more favorable, conditions all around would have been better.

The Janesville circus-going public today are enthusiastic with the performance and rate it as the peer of the Carl Hagenbeck circus, which was such a hit here a number of years ago. A large number of the animals and trainers with Mr. Barnes were obtained from the Carl Hagenbeck shows.

TORN UP DIAMOND STOPS SUNDAY GAME

Circus Horses and Wagons Raise Havoc With Baseball Plot at Fair Grounds.—Postpone Contest.

The Janesville Cardinals are to be idle Sunday. Manager George Caldwell made this announcement this morning after inspecting the diamonds at the fair grounds. The infield and outfield was torn up by a great extent by the heavy circus wagons and the crowds yesterday that it would be impossible to play. The water-soaked ground has been cut a foot deep in some places and it will require several days' work and several more of bright sunshine before the diamond can be played.

Mr. Caldwell was in telephone communication with the manager of the Rockford Maroons this morning and called off the game.

ROAD PAL FALLS OUT; ALL GO TO STATION

Three Are Taken by Police This Morning—Have Varied Stories of Robbery.

Clarence Shane and Eddie Kane were good fellows. When they quit their Klondike wage jobs at Kenosha they came back and again resumed the journey that has no ending. "Slim" Black happened to be in the same side door Pullman that the two boarded out of Kenosha.

"Slim" Black was suave in manner, a good talker and a fairly good dresser as far as glad rags go in the world of the "bo." Clarence and Eddie struck up an amicable acquaintance and soon the trio were pals. Clarence and Eddie had "blowed" after a short visit at their home at Kenosha Bay five months ago. They were good pals and had pay-dirt totaling about twenty dollars when they left the lake port.

That was five days ago. Slim was broke but his two new acquaintances made that no drawback and he shared their coin fully. Clarence and Eddie earned his portion of it. They blew into South Janesville about midnight and later came to this city. Eddie paid for the room at the Railroad hotel and the two turned in about two o'clock.

When Eddie came down stairs this morning he discovered that $7.50 in silver he had "rolled" them during the night, but he was emphatic in his denial. The pair did not say much, but determined whether or not they could determine whether or not they could get away. So when a train whizzed by the last fact Clarence and Eddie before he was able to get away. Eddie came to his pal's rescue and together they held Slim.

A hustler took all three to the station. Chief Chapman took them each a deal to determine whether Slim's denial of the robbery or of the fact that Clarence and Eddie were correct.

IOWA RAIL VICTIM MAY BE LOCAL MAN

Police Attempting to Locate Information Concerning Dead Man Thought to Have Been Here.

Over at Elk River Junction in Clinton county, Iowa, recently Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway literally ground a man to pieces. The dead and face were the only portions of the body remaining. Any condition for identification and even the face had to be moulded into shape to determine whether or not the unknown victim was the same person whose picture on a cheap post card, torn and mutilated, was found at the scene of the accident.

Inside the store collar was a label bearing the store name of "Wilcox, Always All." The name was in hopes of identification. Dr. C. F. Kellogg, Clinton county coroner has written Chief of Police Chapman with a request to make an inquiry this afternoon.

Accompanying the letter was the post card picture and also another similar picture taken from the original. The man appeared to be between the age of twenty-five and thirty years, with full facial features and light hair.

The picture showed him in a heavy robe, holding a large book in his left hand with both arms extended in the manner of a clergyman, giving a blessing or illustrating by gestures some passage from which he was reading.

Officer William Gower thought he identified the picture as that of a young man who had been about the city for some time. It was planned to have the photographs in the man's hands with the purpose of establishing the identity. He was killed on May 25.

QUARTER ARGUMENT MAKES GREEK FIGHT

Hat Cleaner in Dispute Lays Out Two Men in Tussle at Main Street Corner This Noon.

Harry Paulous, the Greek proprietor of the hat cleaning establishment in connection with the hair salon at the side of the Myers hotel on Milwaukee street near Main street, saw Fred Fulton at the concert following the circus performance last night and in a very forcible manner, laid out the title of "The Terrible Greek" in a wrangle at his place of business at noon today.

Some time ago James Kemmett, a bartender at the Grand hotel, dated the accumulations of winter months of his last season's straw hat and decided that he would get the summer's wear from the head of the matter having it cleaned. He took it to Paulous for the whitewashing.

Ashten, with a companion, Ray Ashten, he called to get the hat. The cleaner wanted several cents because of the nature of the job, but Kemmett desired to pay fifty cents.

An argument started and according to the police Harry laid loose a la Fred Fulton. He hit Kemmett first. Ashten attempted to interfere and with broken glass he caused the minor injury to the Greek.

Paulous turned his attention to the Illinois man and he too, measured his length on the sidewalk.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

67. DAISY DEAN

Miss Juanita Hansen, who plays the heroine's part in "The Secret of the Submarine," is trying to qualify as the leading feminine dare-devil of the screen. While taking a scene recently, she was required to hang on a grapevine directly over a menacing quagmire. Without a murmur of complaint she hung grimly to her perilous position, until suddenly the vine snapped, precipitating its helpless burden into the quicksands. A lasso flung about the struggling girl's shoulders saved her in time from death.

At another time, Miss Hansen remained within two minutes of certain death in a water-logged submarine. Riding in a racing car as it leaped a thirty-foot leap in a bridge, and losing control of an aeroplane while crossing a mountain chasm, this little blond Spartan considers a tame experience. She has no doubt, however, that being dropped into a cellar with hands and feet bound, while an exploding bomb wrecked the building, sent a shiver up and down even her fearless spine.

JUANITA HANSEN.

Although she is one of the leading dare-devils of the screen, there is nothing masculine about Miss Hansen. She has a woman's love for pretty and dainty garments, and spends much of her time planning distinctive creations.

And She Won't Play Emotional Roles.

Eva Tanguay got tired of waiting for movie producers to offer her that $500,000 or $1,000,000 or $10,000 a week, or whatever it was she asked, and is going to produce her own film play.

Eva's is one of the few really valuable ideas that have not yet been used in the movies. The film play in which she is to make her debut is one she has had in her trunk for nearly two years now. No information as to the character of the play is given out. However, we are assured that Miss Tanguay does not plan to do emotional roles like those of Sarah Bernhardt in the movies. Mrs. Carter, Theda Bara and Clara Kimball Young.

And We Have Our Custard Pie Humor.

Constance Collier, the latest star to be added to the program on which she is appearing in Forest Park, declares that the English motion picture companies—and Constance Collier is English—produce the most uninteresting fiction in the world.

"I wonder," adds the publicity man, "if Miss Collier has ever seen our own 'custard pie' type of comedy?"

Wonder who they mean? It's for pression, gives wonderful material for a photodrama, intense, gripping and unusual. The Lasky company always noted for its accuracy and attention to details, has gone even further in the production of "The Sowers." A former costumer in the Imperial Court at Petrograd was secured to design the military uniforms and gowns worn throughout the production. During the tremendous scenes in the Royal Palace, all of the interior scenes, are exact replicas of the rooms either in the palace at Petrograd or some of the other domiciles of the Imperial family.

AT THE BEVERLY

Trio of Favorites in "Martha's Vindication"

Three popular Triangle players, Norma Talmadge, Theda Bara, and Seena Owen, are featured in the new Griffith-Triangle drama, "Martha's Vindication."

Norma Talmadge, the Triangle-Fine Arts Star, Who is Appearing in "Martha's Vindication."

This "vindication," which will be shown Sunday at the Beverly Theatre, seldom has the Triangle produced a better "dressed" play than "Martha's Vindication." Miss Talmadge wears several expensive but simple costumes required by her part, and this one play that contains at least fifteen different changes of costume. Miss Owen wears three evening gowns, five afternoon dresses, two suits, four negligees and one tailor-made. In addition to this outfit, which was provided especially for "Martha's Vindication," the young actress also wears expensive furs, shoes, veils and the like.

AT BEVERLY THEATRE.

Bessie Barriscale in "Bullets and Brown Eyes"

Although many photodramas have been written around plots dealing with the doings of royalty in mythical kingdoms, J. G. Hawks, "Bullets and Brown Eyes," the Triangle-Kay-Bee feature in which Bessie Barriscale is starred, at the Beverly tonight is declared to have set a new standard for this kind of production.

Though the production is said to be replete with thrills and the tragedy battle, the author has laid stress on the fact that it is a romance, and in preparing his script for production, did so with the idea of making the love story paramount.

With Miss Barriscale ever in mind, the author has written a sympathetic role in which she appears as the heroine of many stirring adventures. These she shares with William Desmond, who plays the chief supporting role, one which portrays him as a reckless young leader of light cavalry who terrorizes the people of the enemy's country, and finally brings him face to face with the star in a situation charged with dramatic possibilities.

AT THE BEVERLY

"Betrayed" On Monday

Mutual Masterpieces will present on Monday at the Beverly the five act feature "Betrayed" with Grace De Carlton in the leading role. The usual comedy will also be shown.

AT THE APOLLO.

John Barrymore Superb in "The Red Widow"

"The Red Widow," a photo-adaptation of the celebrated comedy by Channing Pollock and Remond Wolf, in which John Barrymore is starred as Cicero Hannibal Butts, is the Famous Players Film company's current Paramount picture at the Apollo.

on Wednesday.

The comic predicaments in which the distinguished corset salesman finds himself involving the Russian Secret Police and innumerable nihilists, with a marked penchant for bomb throwing, give John Barrymore the best opportunity he has had since becoming a photoplay star of demonstrating beyond all doubt his right to be called the foremost comedian of the screen today. Chased aloft into the crow's nest of a steamer by visions of Siberia and elected to kill the czar by a company of nihilists to whom he is introduced as the greatest living king killer, Butts dies about three imaginary deaths a minute in his agony of apprehension.

Eluding the ferocious band of which he has so unwillingly become a member, Butts chances upon one of the number just as he is hurling a bomb at two of the nobility. After an instant of fearful uncertainty, Butts rushes forward, catches the bomb in mid air and then nearly perishes with fear before he can get the thing out of his possession.

AT THE APOLLO

Valdeville Promises Good

Two big acts are on the bill at the Apollo tonight and Sunday. The first is a Chinese act in which five people do some novel work including hanging by the hair. The other is the Eight Black Dots composed of four colored men and four colored women. They feature singing and dancing. Gilbert and Bremnick present a comedy musical skit and Helen McCormick entertains with her charming voice.

The motion pictures are changed each day and the orchestra has become a real musical treat for all shows.

CIRCUS INTERRUPTED BY HEAVY DOWNPOUR

Miniature Cloudburst Alarms Audience at Afternoon Performance.

A miniature cloudburst interrupted the afternoon performance of the Al. G. Barnes circus yesterday. The first show was coming to its conclusion, and the Wild West after-show had been announced, when the skies opened up and the rain fell in a deluge. The crowd started to leave the tent in a body, despite the cries of the show men to keep their seats. But in a moment when the rain had reached the animal tent, they realized that it meant worse than a soaking to go outside, so they stood around in wet, daddled groups, while the rain poured down on the tent which occasionally spilled a few gallons inside.

The animal acts were excellent, especially the one where two girls danced around the ring, tantalizing the lions and leopards until they became so angry that they growled and snapped at the dancers.

The seal acts were good, also, and the seals, while riding horseback showed such ability in catching balls thrown at them that it is certain that if any major league scout had been in the tent, the seals would have been immediately signed up on long contracts.

The trained bears gave a fine performance and the elephant who lumbered about the ring carrying a little pony on its back, brought forth a burst of applause from the audience. Some excellent trained dogs performed to an appreciative audience in the two side rings.

While this show lacked the usual trapeze work, the novelty of so many trained animals was appreciated much more than the aerial performances which would have been given if the afternoon's downpour, and a large crowd turned out for the evening show.

Everyday Wisdom

By DON HEROLD

UTILIZATION OF FIREPLACES IN SUMMER

There are millions of unused fireplaces in America to-night, (and every other summer to-night). Each of them averages from three to eight cubic feet of space. Waste, absolute waste, every inch of it! (Every cubic inch of it!)

If all the fireplaces in America were placed side by side and on top of each other, the space occupied, or rather the space unoccupied, would be equal to all the space occupied by all the apartment buildings in New York City.

What shall we do to stop this horrible waste?

As we have suggested in a previous number of Everyday Wisdom, a fireplace makes a good place to set a hen. That is one way out of it. But there must be others. There is a fireplace makes an excellent place for raising cucumbers. Shovel a wheelbarrow load of rich dirt into your fireplace and plant it full of cucumbers. When they come up, the family can sit around the fireplace on hot summer nights and enjoy thorough comfort, cooling themselves in front of the cucumbers. Don't let your fireplace stand idle in summer.

(It also makes a fine place to sleep a baby.)

Be kind and considerate to others, depending somewhat of course upon who they are.

'HAMLET' PRODUCTION IN EXPERT HANDS

Directing of Milton College Shakespearean Play, Presented June 13th, Under Able Supervision of Prof. L. H. Stringer.

The play, Hamlet, which will be given by the four literary societies of Milton College June 13th, is under the able direction of Prof. L. H. Stringer, of that institution.

In 1908 Mr. Stringer himself played the part of Hamlet, and thus has the inestimable aid of experience to help him in his coaching. He graduated from Milton College with the class of '09, and for four years has been the college's instructor in public speaking, and the school of oratory.

Thus, it can be seen that it would be hard to find anyone in the country more capable of directing such a play than Mr. Stringer. One will seldom have a chance to see a better production of Shakespeare's masterpiece, and this year, the ter-centenary of his death, it is especially appropriate.

Entirely new scenery will be used in the production, which is the work of Howard Tuttle, leading Milwaukee artist, who paints the scenery for the Alhambra Theatre. This scenery closely resembles that which was used in the Shakespearean pageant at Milton College, and is a new idea in stage settings which more closely approaches the Shakespearean idea than the old scenery did.

The title role is taken by Kenneth B. Randolph, 16, the same one who played Romeo in Romeo and Juliet last year. Adelaide Bartholomew will play the part of Ophelia, and a very excellent cast supports these two.

This play will easily surpass any amateur productions ever given in the state, and will at least equal most of the professional ones.

TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE WITNESS SHAKESPEARE PLAY IN ST. LOUIS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—More than ten thousand persons, seated on the slope of a hill in Forest Park here this evening, saw the first of a series of outdoor performances of Shakespeare's "As You Like It," given in observance of the three hundredth anniversary of the poet's death. A permanent outdoor municipal theatre is expected to result from the present Shakespeare series.

The present performances constitute St. Louis' contribution to the Shakespeare ter-centennial and follow the production in New York on May 24 of the masque "Caliban," based on "The Tempest."

The 500 amateur performers who took part in the play tonight will rest tomorrow night and an equal number will take part tonight of the appearance of the third night, and thus the two casts will alternate throughout the week.

Miss Margaret Anglin played the part of Rosalind, Robert Mantell portrayed Lacques and other professional players took the other principal roles. The choruses and massed parts were taken by St. Louis amateurs, who volunteered their services.

The production was under the auspices of the Pageant Drama association, which two years ago produced the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis in Forest Park, before audiences that at one of the performances exceeded 150,000 persons. The city contributed to the performances of "As You Like It" the free use of Forest Park. Two thousand of the ten thousand seats occupied were free, but charges on the remainder were made in order to defray the cost of preparing the park for presentation of the drama and to pay other incidental expenses.

Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid in "The Love Mask."

Having marked an epoch in photodramatic history with their wonderful performance in "The Golden Chance," Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid appear together in a new production by the Jessie L. Lasky Feature Play company, entitled "The Love Mask," a gripping Western drama at the Apollo on Monday. Miss Ridgely has been bowing before photo-play lovers for several years. Mr. Reid's most notable engagement before he becomes a Lasky star was in support of Geraldine Farrar in the Lasky production of "Carmen."

The story of "The Love Mask" has to do with the adventures of a young woman who on the death of her parents through the mad rush for California gold in 1849, was forced to seek out a claim and eke out her own existence by panning gold. How she strikes a mother lode, only to have it taken away from her—how she disguises herself as "Silver Spurs"—a notorious bandit—how the sheriff, in love with her, is torn between conflicting emotions and how it is at last straightened out, is told in one of the most novel stories the Lasky company has ever offered to the public.

Blanche Sweet on Tuesday.

Blanche Sweet in the thrilling story of Russian political intrigue will be the attraction at the Apollo on Tuesday in the Jessie L. Lasky production of "The Sowers," founded upon Henry Seton Merriman's novel of the same name, written especially for Miss Sweet by the noted dramatist, Marion Fairfax and produced under the direction of Wm. C. De Mille. Miss Sweet, one of the most popular photodramatic stars, was recently seen in "The Ragamuffin" and "The Black List." In the first she was a child of the slums, and in the second the daughter of a poor miner. In "The Sowers" she is seen as a member of a royal Russian household and will have an opportunity to display many beautiful gowns.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will water out in air intake of carburetor while motor is running? J. B. C. It is claimed that a little water injected into the carburetor when motor is running will help to reduce the carbon. The moisture drawn in in this manner has a tendency to soften the carbon deposits, which will more readily break up and blow out through the exhaust. There are a number of such tricks, which are claimed to be good to reduce carbon, but there are none which will entirely remove it.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Would you please answer the following questions as soon as convenient through your columns? Which of the two following combinations is to be preferred as more nearly safeguarding one against blowouts? 1. Good tubes in fair shoes. 2. Fair tubes in good shoes. Of course I fully understand good tubes in good shoes are to be in all odds preferred, but if you were required to have either shoes or tubes fair (I do not mean poor), which chance would you take, fair shoes and good tubes or good shoes and fair tubes? C. H. It is better to use fair tubes in good shoes. The casings will stand the hard work and serve to protect the tubes. A fairly good tube may last for an indefinite period in a good casing. If the casing is weak, however, the fact that the tube is good will not prevent either punctures or blowouts.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will you kindly inform me whether refiners are beneficial in new tires in regard to punctures, blowouts, etc.? R. H. B. Refiners will not prevent blowouts or punctures in a new tire. Where there is much speed wear refiners will augment overhauling of the tire and also reduce its resiliency. Worn or stone-bruised tires, however, may be greatly benefited by use of refiners and the service of the tire greatly prolonged.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Please solve this trouble with a Ford car. What makes the car creep along when the engine is running free with quite a lot of power. It will do this even with the brakes off of the clutch altogether. The clutch is well oiled inside. C. H. A slight friction of parts or bearing surfaces would cause this. The car is very light and rolls easily, and for this reason takes very little to cause it to move forward. If you investigate very carefully you will undoubtedly find some parts dragging which apparently look free.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I had the motor in my car overhauled recently and since that time it runs well at a slow rate of speed, but when I go faster than twenty miles an hour it misses. It has four coils with buzzers, no magneto. What do you think is wrong? F. P. If you are sure that the carburetor is adjusted properly for high speed would suggest that you clean out the timer so that the roller will make a clean contact with the segments or contact pieces. If they are dirty the roller at the end of the timer shaft will not make a good electrical connection when going very fast. A little oil in the timer is good.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—My car has a bothersome noise in the rear axle. I have adjusted the driving pinion in every way, and have taken axle nut, which is a semi-floating type, and have adjusted the bearings and everything else which I thought might be causing this noise, but have been unable, however, to remedy this condition and would greatly appreciate an expression of your opinion on this matter. T. A defective bearing supporting the pinion shaft would cause this trouble. Likewise, if you mesh too closely the two bevel gears, a disagreeable noise will result. After two years of this type have been run a considerable length of time it is not advisable to attempt to adjust them.

HELPFUL HINTS.—Sometimes trouble is experienced on the road with broken universal joint pins on regular shaft. Why is this? There is no grease in the vicinity a temporary repair can be made by using a bundle of iron wire or a heavy ball wedged in the yokes of joint to pass the power to rear axles. It is not good policy to see how long the valves will hold compression without grinding. The valves should be re-set about every 2,000 miles whether the compression is good or not. Especially is this true with the exhaust valves. If they are projected into the cylinder they become pitted, and then it is difficult to grind them into good condition again. Very often after waiting until this condition arises it will be found necessary to install new valves.

A slight dent in a fender may be remedied without damage to the paint by a little care. Two hardwood blocks should be obtained, one shaped to the curve of the under part of the fender at the dent and the other curved to the contour of the upper surface of the fender. While the one block is held under the dent the other is held with a hammer until the dent is smoothed out. It may be well to heat the under side of the fender with a blow torch to prevent the paint cracking. The heat should not be too great or the paint will be burned.

On cars having air clutch springs it is advisable to cover the clutch pedal foot rest with rubber to prevent the foot from slipping. Especially in wet weather will this be found helpful and restful to the driver. One can also control the clutch action to better advantage.

When a combination timer and distributor is used few people think to lubricate the working parts. In this timing device the contact breaker should be frequently cleaned and adjusted; also a small amount of fresh oil used. If neglected for too great a length of time the parts will rust and stick. If this takes place misfiring is bound to result.

too closely. They wear themselves in such a manner that if meshed too closely they will ride on high spots caused by previous wear. More than likely you will find a badly worn bearing which is causing trouble. Very often it is necessary to remove a bearing and wash it in gasoline in order to detect its damaged condition. A casual inspection of a bearing when covered with grease will not always reveal its true condition.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I am a constant reader of your paper and have been interested in your motorist columns. I have a new car and have a little trouble with it which I had hard to locate. When I start the car it has a tendency to jerk and throw forward and I have it running over fifteen miles an hour. Then it runs smooth, but I can hear humming. If I have it running less than fifteen miles an hour it begins to throw forward again. I thought that the brakes might be too tight and that it very difficult to turn the rear wheel when it is locked up and the brake is released. Then, again I thought that the carburetor might be faulty, but it has been adjusted since I bought the car. When I throw in the clutch for the first speed there is a grinding noise before the car starts. Could this have anything to do with the uneven riding of the car? Waiting in a reply to your service column. I am, C. E.

If the spark plugs are not adjusted properly the motor will not pull evenly at low speeds. Misfiring on one cylinder would cause the "jerk and throw" you mention. The spark gap at the plugs should be about 1/32 of an inch. The humming noise you hear is probably due to the belt gears of the differential. This is not serious. However, you should make an inspection, and make sure that it does not develop into anything more serious. The clashing of the gears when going into first speed is probably due to your not fully releasing the clutch. Also if you permit motor to race you will have trouble. If this is not the case, then the clutch must be dragging and should be adjusted to obtain additional release. The difficulty you have in shifting into first speed should not affect the running of the car.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I find on applying my emergency brake that it will not release. It used to operate properly. Why is this? F. W. The trouble is generally caused by the shoes of the internal expanding brake being worn and when the cam is operated which expands the brake it turns sufficiently to become horizontal. This makes it impossible for the springs to retract the brake shoes to release the brake by contracting them from against the inside of the brake drum. The remedy is to install new brake shoes or add pieces which will reduce the clearance between the shoes and the drum.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will you kindly let me know if an ounce of camphor is of genuine assistance in increasing the efficiency of a gas engine? Also will it be injurious to valves and pistons to use same? Thanking you in advance, I am, H. Camphor in the quantity mentioned will have no effect on the efficiency of the engine. If used in quantities large enough to give any increase in heating value the impurities of the camphor would be injurious to the cylinders and valves. Besides, the cost would greatly exceed the advantage gained.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I will thank you to advise me through your paper what you think of Graphite in slightly worn cylinders. Also where I could get it. R. The only remedy for worn cylinders is to rebore and fit new pistons and rings. Graphite may help, but it is doubtful whether great success will be obtained. Graphite may be obtained from almost any hardware store or automobile supply store.

CAPT. VON PAPEN, WHO WAS OUSTED FROM U. S. HONORED IN GERMANY

Amsterdam, Netherlands, June 10.—Capt. Franz von Papen, recalled at the request of the United States government as military attaché of the German embassy at Washington, and who has come to Holland on a secret mission, has a purpose which is threefold, according to the Amsterdam Telegraph. This newspaper does not mention Capt. von Papen by name but alludes to him as a "first-class specialist" who only recently arrived here after covering himself with worldwide fame in the exercise of functions in another neutral country.

The Telegraph says that the "specialist" has come here, first, to obtain information of military and political nature; second, to watch foreigners residing in or visiting Holland; and, third, to endeavor to influence public opinion in favor of Germany.

The German "secret" information service in Holland is being reorganized, the Telegraph asserts, the efforts of the "specialist" along this line being the centralizing of diverse and scattered elements of the Teutonic espionage service in this country. He has established the Central Protective Service at the Hague and progress has been made with the organization of the service at Rotterdam, according to the newspaper, which declares that similar efforts at Amsterdam have been a little backward.

In the Rotterdam branch of the service, the Telegraph says, 142 men and 32 women have been enrolled, recruited principally among waiters, porters and other hotel and cafe employees.

DECREASE IN NUMBER OF BELGIAN REFUGEES IS REPORTED IN HOLLAND

(By Associated Press.)

The Hague, Netherlands, June 10.—The number of Belgian refugees in Holland has declined from 7,000,000 after the fall of Antwerp to about 55,000, according to official information. Belgians continue to arrive in Holland from their native land, driven out by the hard conditions of existence there, but the accession apparently is counterbalanced by the outflow from Holland to France, Great Britain or the United States. Of the 55,000 still enjoying Dutch hospitality, 15,000 are accommodated in the four specially erected refugee camps or wooden villages at Ed-Nunspet, Gouda and Uden. The others are living with private families. Besides approximately $1,000,000 or $5,000,000 supplied to refugee Belgians through donations, the Dutch government has contributed about $5,000,000. A sum of $3,000,000 has been voted for the current year, and under peace arrives meanwhile, another $1,000,000 will probably be granted. An offer of reimbursement by the Belgian government has been declined.

Needy Belgians are free to enter the refugee villages. If private families maintain them, the burgomaster is empowered to allow fourteen American cents a day for each adult, and eight cents for each child.

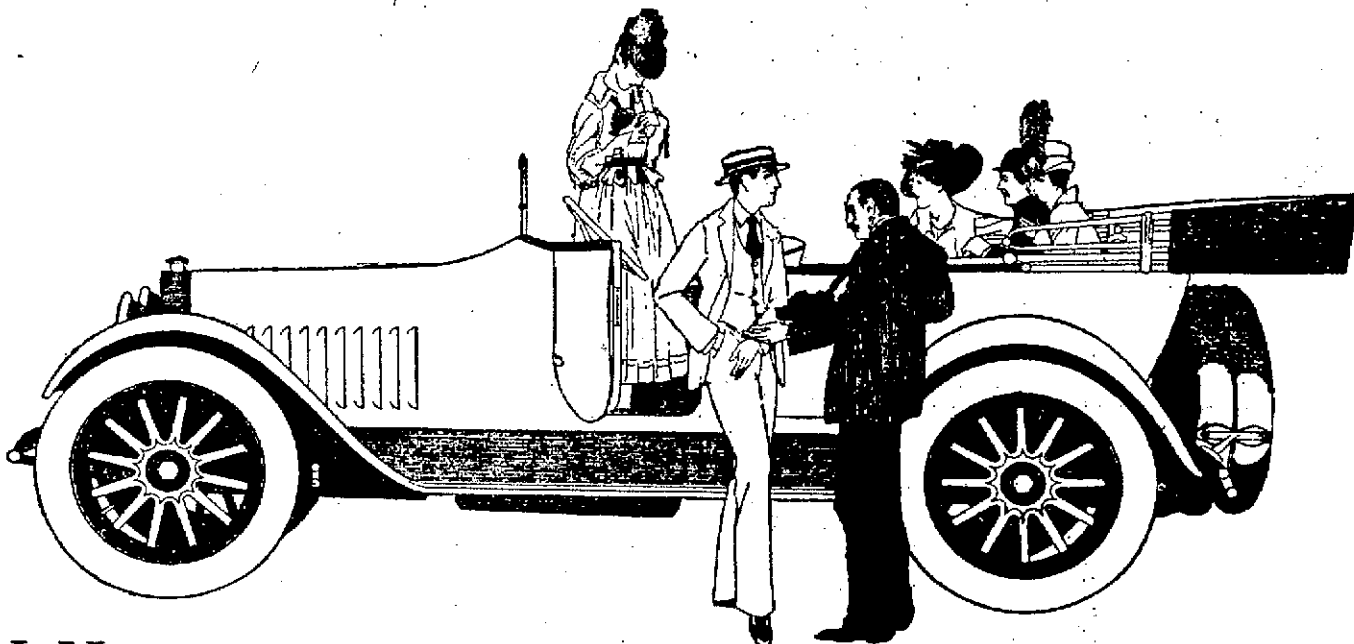

The refugee camps, each of which is controlled by a government commissary, are well organized and equipped, and have churches, schools, shops and postoffices. The inhabitants receive meat, fish or fat daily. They are not compelled to work, but a small wage is offered as an inducement to do so; and wooden houses are used here and then, after the war, perhaps transferred in sections to Belgium to serve as homes (here until the many ruined houses can be rebuilt. This work is being paid for largely out of $130,000 raised in Denmark, with the English Society of Friends lending co-operation.

Camel's Great Usefulness.

For safety and endurance in traveling in desert regions the camel has been found unequalled by any other animal. Its foot is a soft cushion, peculiarly well adapted to the stones and gravel over which it is constantly walking. During a single journey through the Sahara horses have worn out three sets of shoes, while the feet of the camel, traveling over the same course, were not even sore.

I Have a 3400 r. p. m. Ready This Minute For You

This certainly is a great year for selling cars. Most everybody has had success. Some more than others, as is always the case.

Chalmers sales are running 900 per cent ahead of last year all over the United States. Mr. Chalmers' foresight in doubly providing against a shortage of materials has won a great contest.

It has enabled the Chalmers plant to keep on building cars when one or two have shut down or others have had to cut down on allotments to their dealers.

Here it is June and the great Chalmers plant is running day and night, three shifts, turning out more cars than ever before.

How long can Chalmers keep filling the demand?

I don't know. I know only this: the plant is turning out about 125 a day; Chalmers dealers are selling about 425 a day.

The only reason I or any other dealer can supply a car now is because during December, January and February the Chalmers plant worked day and night like Trojans and built about 125 cars a day when the dealers were selling probably only about 80. Soon these 425-a-day sales are going to eat up the surplus made during the Winter months.

I got a letter a few days ago from the Chalmers plant which simply said: "We have on hand orders asking for immediate shipment of cars whose value is in excess of $8,000,000."

I need not narrate the rest of the note which was so obviously subtle that I got the telegraph operators on the job right off.

I'm making my promises on delivery from day to day. I've got cars or can get them now. This may not hold good tomorrow.

Next week I shall cut my promises down still more. Remember, there are only two things that I concern myself with these days. One is to get you to take one ride in a 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers if you have not done so already. That's all I want. The car speaks in a language you'll understand.

The other thing is simply one of mathematics: If the Chalmers factory can turn out 125 cars a day and Chalmers dealers all over the United States are selling 425 a day, how long will the supply last?

Price still unchanged—$1090 Detroit.

Side Lights on the Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later
Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

On Tuesday last I received a letter from Joseph T. Condon, legal adjuster with the Co-op & Lent Show, written from Middleton, O. To give you something of an idea of the hardships that circus folks have to encounter, especially in seasons like this, I will give you his letter in full:

"Friend Dave: I have had my hands full since I saw you in Janesville and in all arrears in my correspondence. Well, we are still in the rain and it looks like a rainy season ahead. The show has been doing a remarkable business in the face of the bad weather, and everyone is satisfied. We have had a great deal of trouble keeping working men, but have not lost a stand since leaving Janesville. We had several days of tough sledding on account of being short of help, but the performers, our boys, ticket sellers, butchers, etc., come to the front and everyone puts his shoulder to the wheel. Even the women folks volunteered to help, which goes to show that everybody is with it."

"We have some real trouper on this show, and in fact, it is just one big family. Taking everything into consideration, I think we have rounded ourselves up as good a bunch of real show folks as any organization on the road."

"Our business in Illinois and northern Indiana has big, Chicago Heights, Gary, Ind., and Kokomo, Ind., and we are doing a business in all three places. The show is doing a big night business, which speaks well for the performance. North Vernon, Indiana, was showed in a terrible storm, and nearly blew us down, ripped one side of the big top to pieces, and blew the seats down, but we got everybody out in time. We finally got fixed up and gave one show at three o'clock and got $500. We got off the lot at six o'clock next morning, jumped 65 miles to Lawrenceburg, Ind., and opened the show for the big show at 1 p. m. That's what I call going some."

"Well, Dave, all the boys are well and send regards. I trust this finds you and your wife in good health. Will send you route as soon as it is out. Let me hear from you."

"Yours respectfully,
"Jos. T. Condon."

On Tuesday a new species of Miller dropped into Janesville. It was the kind of a miller that grinds your wheat, nor was it a moth miller, that eats a hole in your clothes. It was Cass, Emma C. Miller of Pasadena, California, in a new role—that of agent with the Al. C. Barnes great animal circus. She had not been in Janesville but a short time when she sent a messenger after me, saying that she wanted an interview with Sidlights on the Circus.

Miss Miller is a bright, charming woman, the kind that it does you good to meet, and is certainly taking the new role of press agent in a manner that does credit to herself and the show that she represents.

Miss Miller's home is in Pasadena, California, and her first work was on the newspapers of that city. Occasionally she would write an article for different magazines, and after Mr. Barnes had heard of her work, he was not long in making up his mind that he could secure her services as press agent with the show, that it would be a new innovation in the business, and one that he thought would surely make a hit.

Miss Miller is thoroughly in love with her position, and the kind that will make friends wherever she goes. She told me that the first few days in the business she thought it a question whether she would be recalled by the newspapers of the country in a kind way, but said that everybody had been so kind and gracious to her, that she felt as though this might possibly be her life work.

Miss Miller showed me a scrap book she carried with her, with many notices from different papers praising her in her new work, and many other pretty articles which she has written herself for the different papers throughout the country. While Miss Miller is the first to undertake the field as press agent with the circus, it is fair to say that the time is coming when others will follow in her footsteps.

ROOSEVELT HAS DONE A PATRIOTIC SERVICE

COLONEL HAS CLARIFIED ISSUES
BEFORE AMERICAN PEOPLE
TODAY, SAYS USHER.

BUSINESS PROSPERITY

From Financial and Manufacturing Standpoints This Country Has Little More to Expect.

BY ELLIS B. USHER.

Milwaukee, June 10.—As this letter is written the decision of the fate of the Republican party hangs in the balance at Chicago. By the time it is published a decision will probably have been reached. The man question has been determined for many months and it has received new emphasis at Chicago. The country will have nothing of a German dictatorship in its politics and no party shares go to the people with any such handicap upon it. Roosevelt has assisted in clarifying the issue and it is a patriotic service, one that is political advantage of the democratic party. The conservative sentiment of the country that is for America first, and only for America, will follow the ruler that has been followed in every crisis in the country's history—it will stand by the president and will back up the president at the head of that government.

Prosperity in Evidence.
There is every evidence of a business condition of much prosperity notwithstanding the fact that this is a presidential year. It is a condition that takes the wind out of the stock market bugaboo "southern" and "bread-line" times, and it makes high tariff talk a joke, for a falling off in the harvest, just before election, and a slump in foreign affairs, which has recently begun, might leave those who chirp too much in a plight similar to the European croakers. It is unnecessary to take any such a chance. England and France are doing more for themselves than they were a few months back. That is why they are putting an embargo on so many articles from this country and buying only food. I understand that Wisconsin "war orders," automobiles, socks, shoes, etc., are nearly finished and no new orders are coming in. Moreover, that export business is lighter, very much at all the great ports. So in an abnormal sense it is safe to reckon close, even when profits are great. New York has for two years been the greatest port in the world. Financially this country is wonderful. Paul Warburg of the Reserve Bank board announced some weeks ago that the United States is out of debt to Europe, so we are, for the first time in history, a credit nation. Our banks are full. If our granaries are as full as usual this fall, conditions here will be prosperous beyond precedent if the war continues and export business does not slump.

Agricultural Bulletin.
The recent bulletin of the Wisconsin department of agriculture are interesting improved and made more useful than they used to be and contain facts as to rainfall and temperature that are of general interest. The season so far has been cool with abundant rainfall and less sunshine than usual. The statistics of sunshine, especially, will surprise many people who look upon the shore of Lake Michigan as a dismal region. Of the possible average of April sunshine, Milwaukee this year had 51 per cent and Green Bay 48, while Madison had 58 per cent and La Crosse 49. For the year these places stood as follows: Milwaukee, 53; Madison, 53; La Crosse, 58, and Green Bay, 57. In April, 1915, the mean temperature for the state was 52. This year it was 42.3, which was a trifle below the average of the past ten years, which was 43.7. These figures come from the U. S. weather bureau and indicate that this has been a dry year. The weather of the spring, but this is true of the entire country east of the Rocky Mountains. When I was east I left Boston in a new steam train on April 28, and early in May I found the season fully three weeks late in New Jersey and in Washington. There are great surprises for the weather fault finder in the west.

The bulletin also calls attention to a new law in 1915 permitting a farmer to register a name for his farm with the register of deeds of his county. He must not choose a name already registered in the county by someone else. Up to May first 3,703 farmers in the state had availed themselves of this new privilege. This is a plan that if adopted generally will give a name to the farm and it will be interesting as well as convenient; but the names will need to be well chosen and very original or they will become monotonous with repetitions in many counties.

Of Interest to Bankers.
A meeting of one of the groups of the Wisconsin bankers' association held at La Crosse this week expressed a feeling, widely prevailing, against the order of the Federal Reserve board requiring national banks to make checks payable at all times, without charge for collection, and after July 15. This order has already cost the new reserve system some membership, and if the order is enforced it will cost more. A number of New York banks, in the interior, have surrendered their national charters in recent months, and western banks have been surrendering national charters and taking state charters, for a year or more. About twenty national banks have changed to state banks in Nebraska since the new system was inaugurated, and so far very few state banks in the country have changed to national banks, and no trust company banks have joined the federal system. Withstand much effort to crowd the federal system, it has not been the success that would be supposed, from some of the praise bestowed upon it. It is an attempt to put finance in a straight jacket, and futile usury laws and credit taxation long ago demonstrated that all such efforts are unsuccessful.

A Real Track Coach.
It is evident that Tom Jones, the Badger track mentor, is a real coach. He realizes the necessity of developing second and third raters into point winners. The first places will always take care of themselves. A man good enough to grab a first is dependable to do his share. It is the second string fellows who are the trouble along behind, who, by their efforts, win or lose track meets. Too often these men are neglected. It is the dream of every coach to have a team that consists of first place winners. That the seconds or thirds are necessary is a cold fact which they recognize by halfheartedly developing a few second class athletes to take care of them. I do not know the methods that Jones uses, but will guarantee that besides his stars he has a large and regular reserve of healthy youngsters all working under his own eye.

each one of whom is being trained to collect point or two. Occasionally a crack team scores, but the rule is that third and fourth place points determine the outcome. "It's the little things that count in life."

Large Business Gains.
The general increase of railway tonnage this year is large, despite the freight embargo at seaboard terminals, and the Erie road has been getting its full share of the increased business. This is demonstrated with going out of Wisconsin. General Agent Ebbett tells me that up to June 1 this year, five months, there was an increase over the same months of 1915 of $250,000 in the Erie's business in this territory. As the boys say, "That listens good," and keeps Wisconsin on the Erie map. I was told in New York that of a largely increased business in February Wisconsin on the Erie map. I was kept all the big shippers on their feet posted as to when an embargo was ordered, and also whenever it was lifted, so they assist them to get their goods to their destinations to the best advantage. Then, too, the Erie's general offices in New York have a good many Wisconsin men in their employ who can help them when Wisconsin shippers need help and they can help them.

Short Notes.
The wife of Justice Hughes was born in this city. Her father was Walter Carter, who afterward became a prominent lawyer in New York. Her oldest brother, now Dr. Colin S. Carter of New York, lived in La Crosse in the early eighties.

Milwaukee colleges are having a good season. Marquette raised a half million for endowment a short time ago. Up to May first 3,703 farmers in the state had availed themselves of this new privilege. This is a plan that if adopted generally will give a name to the farm and it will be interesting as well as convenient; but the names will need to be well chosen and very original or they will become monotonous with repetitions in many counties.

The Wisconsin Woman Suffragists marched in the rain in Chicago Wednesday in a procession about as large as they have ever had. The majority of the suffrage that was just counted up in Iowa. They have courage, even if they represent a state that overwhelms them when it comes to votes.

The Great Lakes Transit company that bought all the railroad vessels, when the government ordered the divorce of lake and rail lines, has filed a schedule of freight rates with the interstate commerce commission that shows some increases over the old lake and rail tariffs. So far this season lake and rail business at Lake Michigan ports is dead.

Uses of Liquid Air.
Liquid air is poorly adapted to the uses which were suggested for it when it was first made in large quantities—that is, for refrigeration and for power. Its latent heat of evaporation is small and its specific heat is also small. It cannot compete with ammonia for refrigeration. It cannot be kept in a closed vessel, but must always have a vent to the air. For explosives many better materials are available. It is used to some extent to secure the oxygen of the air by first liquefying the air and then boiling off the nitrogen, which boils at a lower temperature than the oxygen.

COMMON AMERICAN BIRDS.
INTERESTING INFORMATION ABOUT THEM
SUPPLIED BY THE BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL
SURVEY OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

LOGGERHEAD SHRIKE
(Lanius ludovicianus)

Length, about nine inches. A gray, black, and white bird, distinguished from the somewhat similarly colored mockingbird by the black stripe on side of head.
Range: Breeds throughout the United States, Mexico, and southern Canada; winters in the southern half of the United States and in Mexico.
Habits and economic status: The loggerhead shrike, or southern butcher bird, is common throughout its range and is sometimes called "French mockingbird" from a superficial resemblance and not from its notes, which are harsh and unmusical. The shrike is naturally an insectivorous bird which has extended its bill of fare to include small mammals, birds, and reptiles. Its hooked beak is well adapted to tearing its prey, while to make amends for the lack of talons it has hit upon the plan of forcing its victim, if too large to swallow, into the fork of a bush or tree, where it can tear it asunder. Insects, especially grasshoppers, constitute the larger part of its food, though beetles, moths, caterpillars, ants, wasps, and a few spiders are also taken. While the butcher bird occasionally catches small birds, its principal vertebrate food is small mammals, as field mice, shrews, and moles, and when possible it obtains lizards. It habitually impales its surplus prey on a thorn, sharp twig, or barb of a wire fence.

DESTROYED STATES TO GET FUNDS FIRST

Business Men of Belgium and Invaded
Parts of France Will Produce
Trade Before Making Loans.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
British Headquarters, France, May 10.—The idea that enormous quantities of material will be immediately in demand to rebuild the destroyed sections of France and Belgium once peace comes seems mistaken.

"We shall not be able to buy many things until we have something to sell which will bring us money to buy with," said a citizen of Ypres, the most ruined of cities and where the wreckage is still pounded by shells. No civilian inhabitants are allowed to live in the city, but an indication of how reconstruction will begin is evident in the shanties which have been built near the front, often in the zone of shell fire. Boards, disordered oil cans beaten flat, salvaged tiles or bricks and any other kind of material that can be procured at no expense are used to make a shelter for a man and his family.

When the refugees return to their ruined village or town in the fighting zone his first object will be to get his head above the sea of rubble and to reclaim acres which have grown up to weeds and are pockmarked with shell holes; or, if he is in business, he will want any kind of temporary premises on the site of his old place of business—which he will occupy because it is his and because it is there that his old customers may expect to find him.

The simple wooden houses which the army has built for "rest camps" for the soldiers when out of the trenches will become squatter settlements. Only less amazing than the amount of material which the army will leave behind because it is not worth transporting back to England will be the use the thrifty French and Belgians will make of it. For up to the very moment of peace, whether it comes this year or five years hence, the army must have ample material in reserve for continuing the war.

Lumber, wooden supports for barb wire, umbering for the trenches and dugouts—all will be adapted to their necessities by impoverished people who have suffered from the loss of property and enforced idleness. Any funds they have saved will be needed for immediate capital to buy stocks of goods or farm implements and animals. It will probably be years before the permanent buildings will take the place of temporary shelters. The restoration of such splendid buildings as the Cloth Hall at Ypres and the Hotel de Villa in Arras will come only when the civic prosperity will permit, unless an indemnity or a government grant is distributed for the purpose. Even in that case the first practical use of money and labor will be to restore business to something like its normal functions.

Rockford is Prosperous Under

The following short statement from W. W. Bennett, mayor of Rockford, expresses the sentiment of business and professional men in Rockford regarding the license question. No doubt many of our people have talked personally with residents of Rockford and have received from them substantially the same report. Mr. Bennett's statement is as follows:

"Prohibition has resulted in great saving in the city. People are now receiving value received for the money they have to spend. Savings accounts are growing and old debts are being paid. Less credit is extended and more homes are being built."

Business and professional men and wage-earning heads of families are all for a saloonless city.

REAL TRUTH ABOUT TURK HEIR'S DEATH

The Associated Press Correspondent Learns Facts Regarding Alleged Suicide of Heir to Throne.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Constantinople, May 10.—[Etiquette of the Turkish imperial court and the aversion of the Ottoman to speak of his household and the female members thereof has so far prevented the details of the suicide of the late Turkish heir apparent, Yussuf Izzedin Effendi, from becoming known generally. The Associated Press correspondent has just learned them from a dignitary of the prince's establishment.]

Prince Yussuf Izzedin had for several years been suffering from a nervous affliction, a malady which caused him to visit annually the baths of Europe, including those of Baden, a suburb of Vienna, where the mineral waters are said to have remedial effects in such cases. As the prince grew older the affliction advanced and when the European war broke out he was generally considered a very sick man. Despite this he evinced the keenest interest in military affairs and undertook several tours of inspection to the Gallipoli terrain at the request of the sultan, his uncle. In one of these trips the Associated Press correspondent met him at the headquarters of Liman von Sanders Pasha. It was plain that the prince was under some strain. His conversation was disjointed, although his remarks were in themselves entirely rational.

In the evening on which he died, prince Yussuf Izzedin had retired at his usual hour, going to the apartment of one of his wives. Here he lay down upon a divan. A few minutes later the woman heard him utter a slight groan, and looking at the man, saw he was bleeding. Upon inquiry, the prince replied that the bleeding was due to a slight accident, and then asked the woman to get him a fresh shirt. When she returned with this she found that the prince had locked the door behind her. She then rushed to find one of the attendants. The two returned to the door, but the attendant confined his efforts to asking the prince whether he could enter the room. No answer came, however.

The woman and the attendant then called upon the marshal of the household, who promptly decided to force the door. This proved difficult, as the door was stout and had been well barred from within. In the end it had to be broken down peacefully. Meanwhile the police physician had been routed and his examination disclosed that the arteries in the abdomen had been severed with a sharp knife. This weapon was found between the upholstery of the divan and the wall.

Overland

30" x 34" tires

Production and Price

Do the great variety of Sixes and the fluctuating prices seem confusing and perplexing?

Let's reason it out.

What controls price? Production.

As a manufacturer's production increases, his production cost, per car, decreases.

Therefore the plant with the largest production is in a position to give more of everything and charge less for it.

We are the world's largest producers of Six and Four Cylinder Automobiles.

Consequently you get in the Overland Six a larger and more powerful motor—a longer wheelbase—the convenience of electric control buttons on the steering column and an almost endless list of other comforts and refinements.

—yet what is the price?

Not $1200 or $1300 but $1145.

And when it comes to a Six Cylinder performance, remember the Overland Six is the star of them all.

One ride will convince you.

CHAPTER XXX.

Sibyl and Roscoe were upon the point of leaving when Bibbs returned to the new house. He went straight to Sibyl and spoke to her quietly, but so that the others might hear.

"When you said that if I'd stop to think, I'd realize that no one would be apt to care enough about me to marry me, you were right," he said. "I thought perhaps you weren't, and so I asked Miss Vertrees to marry me. It proved what you said of me, and disproved what you said of her. She refused."

And, having thus spoken, he quitted the room as straightforwardly as he had entered it.

"He's so queer!" Mrs. Sheridan gasped. "Who on earth would thought of his doing that?"

"I told you," said her husband, grimly.

"You didn't tell us he'd go over there and—"

"I told you she wouldn't have him. I told you she wouldn't have him. I didn't!"

Sibyl was altogether taken aback. "Do you suppose it's true? Do you suppose she wouldn't?"

"He didn't look exactly like a young man that had just got things fixed up with his girl," said Sheridan. "Not to me, he didn't."

"But why would—"

"I told you," he interrupted, angrily. "She ain't that kind of a girl! If you got to have proof, well, I'll tell you and get it over with, though I'd pretty near just as soon not have to talk a whole lot about my dear boy's private affairs. She wrote to Jim she couldn't take him, and it was a good, straight letter, too. It came to Jim's office; he never saw it. She wrote it the afternoon he was hurt."

"I remember I saw her put a letter in the mail box that afternoon," said Roscoe. "Don't you remember, Sibyl?"

"I told you about it—I was waiting for you while you were in there so long talking to her mother. It was just before we saw that something was wrong over here, and Edith came and called me."

Sibyl shook her head, but she remembered. And she was not cast down; for, although some remnants of perplexity were left in her eyes, they were dimmed by an increasing glow of triumph; and she departed—after some further fragmentary discourse—visibly elated. After all, the guilty had not been exalted; and she perceived vaguely, but none the less surely, that her injury had been copiously avenged. She bestowed a contented glance upon the old house with the cupola, as she and Roscoe crossed the street.

When they had gone, Mrs. Sheridan indulged in reverie, but after a while she said, uneasily, "Papa, you think it would be any use to tell Bibbs about that letter?"

"I don't know," he answered, walking moodily to the window. "I been thinking about it." He came to a decision. "I reckon I will." And he went up to Bibbs' room.

"Well, you goin' back on what you said?" he inquired, brusquely, as he opened the door. "You goin' to take it back and lay down on me again?"

"No," said Bibbs.

"Well, perhaps I didn't have any call to accuse you of that. I don't know as you ever did go back on anything you said, exactly, though the Lord knows you've laid down on me enough. You certainly have!" Sheridan was baffled. "This was not what he wished to say, but his words were unmanageable; he found himself unable to control them, and his querulous abuse went on in spite of him. 'I can't say I expect much of you—not from the way you always been, up to now—unless you turn over a new leaf, and I can't see any encouragement to think you're goin' to do that! If you go down there and show a spark o' real git-up, I reckon the whole office 'll fall in a faint. But if you're ever goin' to show any, you better begin right at the beginning and begin to show it tomorrow.'"

"Yes—I'll try."

"You better, if it's in you!" Sheridan was cheerily nonplused. He had always been able to say whatever he wished to say, but his tongue seemed bewitched. He had come to tell Bibbs about Mary's letter, and to his own angry astonishment he found it impossible to do anything except to scold like a drudge-driver. "You better come down there with your mind made up to bustle harder than the hardest workin' man that's under you, or you'll not get on very good with me. I tell you! The way to get ahead—and you better set it down in your books—the way to get ahead is to do ten times the work of the hardest worker that works for you. But you don't know what work is, yet. All you've ever done was just stand around and feed a machine a child could handle, and then come home and take a bath and go to bed."

"I tell you you're up against a mighty different proposition now, and if you're worth your salt—and you never showed any signs of it yet—get any signs that stuck out enough to hang somebody on the head and make 'em sit up and take notice—well, I want to say, right here and now—and you better listen, because I want to say just what I do say. I say—"

He mumbled to a full stop. His mouth hung open, and his mind was a hopeless blank.

Bibbs looked up patiently—an old, old look. "Yes, father, I'm listening."

"That's all," said Sheridan, frowning heavily. "That's all I came to say, and you better see 't you remember it!"

He shook his head warningly, and went out, closing the door behind him with a crash. However, no sound of footsteps indicated his departure. He stopped just outside the door, and stood there a minute or more. Then he abruptly turned the knob and exhaled to his son a forehead liberally covered with perspiration.

"Look here," he said, crossly. "That girl over yonder wrote Jim a letter—"

"I know," said Bibbs. "She told me."

"Well, I thought you needn't feel so much upset about it—"

The door closed on his voice as he withdrew, but the conclusion of the sentence was nevertheless audible—"If you knew she wouldn't have Jim, either."

And he stamped his way downstairs to tell his wife to quit her fretting and not bother him with any more fool's errands. She was about to inquire what Bibbs said, but after a second thought she decided not to speak at all. She merely murmured a wordless assent, and verbal communication was given over between them for the rest of the afternoon.

Bibbs and his father were gone when Mrs. Sheridan woke, the next morning, and she had a dreary day. She missed Edith woefully, and she worried about what might be taking place in the Sheridan building. She felt that everything depended on how Bibbs' return held, and upon her husband's return.

In the evening she seized upon the first opportunity to ask him how things had gone. He was noncommittal. What could anybody tell by the first day? He'd seen plenty go at things well enough right at the start and then blow up. Pretty near anybody could show up fair the first day or so. There was a big job ahead. This material, such as it was—Bibbs, in fact—had to be broken in to handling the work Roscoe had done; and then, at least as an overseer, he must take Jim's position in the Realty company as well. He told her to ask him again in a month.

But during the course of dinner she gathered from some disjointed remarks of his that he and Bibbs had lunched together at the small restaurant where it had been. Sheridan's custom to lunch with Jim, and she took this to be an encouraging sign. Bibbs went to his room as soon as they left the table, and her husband was not communicative after reading his paper.

She became an anxious spectator of Bibbs' progress as a man of business, although it was a progress she could glimpse but dimly and only in the evening, through his remarks and his father's at dinner. Usually Bibbs was silent, except when directly addressed, but on the first evening of the third week of his new career he offered an opinion which had apparently been the subject of previous argument.

"I'd like you to understand just what I meant about those storage rooms, father," he said, as Jackson placed his coffee before him. "Abercrombie agreed with me, but you wouldn't listen to him."

"You can talk, if you want to, and I'll listen," Sheridan returned, "but you can't show me that Jim ever took up with a bad thing. The roof fell because it hadn't had time to settle and on account of weather conditions. I want that building put just the way Jim planned it."

"You can't have it," said Bibbs. "You can't, because Jim planned for the building to stand up, and it won't do it. The other one—the one that didn't fail—is so shot, with cracks we haven't dared use it for storage. It won't stand weight. There's only one thing to do: Get both buildings down as quickly as we can, and build over. Bibbs' the best and cheapest in the long run for that type."

Sheridan looked sarcastic. "Fine! What we goin' to do for storage rooms while we're waitin' for those few bricks to be laid?"

"Rent," Bibbs returned, promptly. "We'll lose money if we don't rent, anyhow—they were waitin' so long for you to give the warehouse matter your attention after the roof fell. You don't know what an amount of stuff they've got piled up on us over there. We'd have to rent until we could patch up those process perils—and the Krivitch Manufacturing company's plant is empty, right across the street. I took an option on it for us this morning."

Sheridan's expression was queer. "Look here," he said, sharply. "Did you go and do that without consulting me?"

"It didn't cost anything," said Bibbs. "It's only until tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock. I undertook to convince you before then."

"Oh, you did?" Sheridan's tone was sardonic. "Well, just suppose you couldn't convince me."

"I can, though—and I intend to," said Bibbs, quietly. "I don't think you understand the condition of those buildings you want patched up."

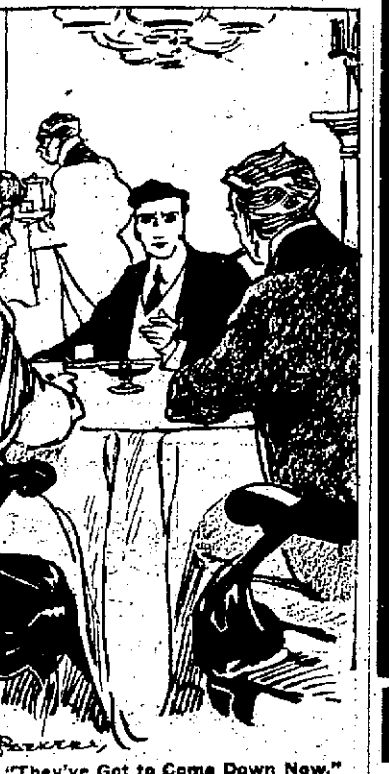

"Now, see here," said Sheridan, with slow emphasis. "Suppose I had my mind set about this. Jim thought they'd stand, and suppose it was—well, kind of a matter of sentiment with me to prove he was right."

Bibbs looked at him compassionately. "I'm sorry if you have a sentiment about it, father," he said. "But whether you have or not can't make a difference. You'll get other people hurt if you trust that process, and that won't do. And if you want a monument to Jim, at least you want one that will stand. Besides, I don't think you can reasonably defend sentiment in this particular kind of affair."

"Oh, you don't?"

"No, but I'm sorry you didn't tell me you felt it."

Sheridan was puzzled by his son's tone. "Why are you sorry?" he asked, curiously. "Because I had the building inspector up there, this noon," said Bibbs, "and I had him condemn both those buildings." "What?" "He'd been afraid to do it before, until he heard from us—afraid you'd see he lost his job. But he can't condemn them—they've got to come down now."

"They've Got to Come Down Now."

Sheridan was puzzled by his son's tone. "Why are you sorry?" he asked, curiously. "Because I had the building inspector up there, this noon," said Bibbs, "and I had him condemn both those buildings."

"What?" "He'd been afraid to do it before, until he heard from us—afraid you'd see he lost his job. But he can't condemn them—they've got to come down now."

Sheridan gave him a long and piercing stare from beneath lowered brows. Finally he said, "How long did they give you on that option to convince me?"

"Until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon."

"All right," said Sheridan, not relaxing. "I'm convinced."

Bibbs jumped up. "I thought you would be. I'll telephone the Krivitch agent. He gave me the option until tomorrow, but I told him I'd settle it this evening."

Sheridan gazed after him as he left the room, and then, though his expression did not alter in the slightest, a sound came from him that startled his wife. It had been a long time since she had heard anything resembling a chuckle from him, and this sound—although it was grim and dry—bore that resemblance.

She brightened eagerly. "Looks like he was startin' right well, don't it, papa?"

"Startin'?" Lord! He got me on the hip! Why, he knew what I wanted—that's why he had the inspector up there, so 't he'd have me beat before we even started to talk about it. And did you hear him? There was always an alloy for Mrs. Sheridan. "I don't just like the way he looks, though, papa."

"Oh, there's got to be something! Only one chick left at home, so you start to frettin' about it!"

"No. He's changed. There's a kind of a settish look to his face, and—"

"I guess that's the common sense comin' out on him, then," said Sheridan. "You'll see symptoms like that in a good many business men, I expect."

"Well, and he don't have as good color as he was gettin' before. And he'd begin to fill out some, but—"

BROWNS BUMP YANKS FROM SECOND PLACE; WASHINGTON WINNER

Two Daring Italian Drivers With Other Famous Pilots Race Today Over Chicago Timber Track.

Speedway, Maywood, Ill., June 10.—Twenty-seven of the world's fastest auto drivers are ready here for the start in the western automobile classic, the second annual Chicago Derby Sunday.

The distance is 300 miles and the prizes amount to $30,000 cash. It was estimated that 100,000 auto fans will be crowded in the grandstand and along the speedway before Starter Fred Wagner sent the speed demons their way.

Half of the crowd were visitors to the Republican, Progressive and Woman's party conventions.

Dario Resta, who won the Derby last year in a Peugeot, establishing a record of 97.58 miles an hour; also the winner of the 500 mile run at Indianapolis May 30th, was back on the job again, a strong favorite. The diminutive Italian couldn't see anyone but himself as the winner. "Those fellows can't beat me. They'll have to smash world records to do it, and I expect to smash a few myself."

Ralph de Palma, who probably has more bad luck than any auto driver in the game, will drive a Mercedes. De Palma has missed winning several big races short distances from the finish because of car trouble. "Nothing like that this time," he said. "I'm taking no chances."

Other entrants are Barney Oldfield, driving a Delage; Tom Alley, Ogresi Christaens, Sunbeam; Eddie O'Donnell, Duessenberg; Billy Chandler, Crawford; and George Adams, Adams Special.

The winner of the Derby will get $12,000; second $6,000; third, $3,000; fourth, $1,500; fifth, $1,300; sixth, $1,200; seventh, $1,100; eighth, $900; tenth, $700.

A cash bonus of $500 will be presented to the driver leading at the end of 100 miles; $500 more to the driver leading at the end of 200 miles; and $500 more to the leader at the end of 300 miles.

BADGERS WILL LOSE MANY STAR ATHLETES

Track Team is Hardest Hit—Two Janesville Candidates for Football and Basketball.

Athletics at Wisconsin are over for the present season. The Badger victory at the Evanston conference meet is the climax for athletics at Wisconsin. Attention now turns to the major sports at Madison. Wisconsin only obtained complete success on the track and at basketball. Their showing the past season on the gridiron was only mediocre and the same is true of the eastern baseball team.

This fall the Badgers expect a big year in football. Hopes are for a conference title, but realizing that Dr. Withington, the Harvard coach, will be new in the west, and that the Wisconsin will be satisfied if it can make a creditable showing. Buck, the All-American line man and captain last year will also coach Eddie Strum, end for three years of the varsity. Simpson, the star tackle and leader in many forms of athletics, Smith, half back, Byers, who was the star half until he "fell" for the holy bonds of matrimony, Cummings, the other half, and Artie Mucks the giant guard, will be lost.

It will take time and work to drill the Wisconsin squad in Harvard system of football. But if the Badgers master the eastern methods they should be in excellent shape to instruct the other conference teams a few things about advanced football. The candidates for the eleven who reported for spring practice were in vast number and it is reported there was ample material. Raymond Edler, the best half back ever turned out at Janesville high, will be among those stands an excellent chance of making the team or at least the squad. He has the weight, the speed and the gameness to make for himself wearing Wisconsin's colors. It is supposed he will be a candidate for either an end or backfield position.

In basketball, in which the Badgers won the title, Captain Hass will be lost along with Lewis, Lynn Smith and Morris. Chandler, the center who should be playing forward, will be back along with Meyer's football captain election, who subbed last year. Two Janesville athletes, Hemming and Edler are picked to make the basketball squad. Hemming, is expected to make either center or forward and last season he was drilled for a forward position. Hemming's playing at center here was remarkable but those who watched his work in numerous games here, cannot see where he is qualified to any extent, for forward. Edler will have hard sledding to make the guard position. Considering all angles, Edler would make a better forward than Hemming. Edler's playing in the hard games here have led Janesville basketball fans to believe that there is a better guard in the west than he and certainly no better player was ever here on a western team, with the possible exception of Young, the Rockford wizard.

The baseball squad at Madison will lose Coach Lewis, best pitcher, Heri Moon and Neuenchwander; Captain Boulware, outfielder; Slaby and Lewis from the infield. The greatest loss from individual athletes getting their sheepskin is when Mucks, Smith and Lewis leave the campus. These three have starred in more than one branch of sport, and Mucks was the strongest point getter on the track team. Smith won three letters in his part in football, basketball and track. The other two named won emblems in two major sports.

MORRIS MILLER

Terry Turner has decided to stop playing golf while the Indians are up in the race. Old Topsy has been up in the big show for a long time now, and he figures that the ancient and royal game will take too much of his energy, which might otherwise be expended in aiding his team to keep up in the fight.

If the Athletics only had Chief Meyer with them it would make it fine for the scorers. They already have Meyer and Myers.

It is a noticeable fact in baseball history that many a winning streak has been broken by a club's cast off pitcher. When a man is with a team he gets to know every weakness and peculiarity of the batters. You can learn a lot more about a hitter pitching to him in morning practice than in the three or four times he comes to the plate in a game.

There has been several cases of rowdism in the big leagues this season and it generally has cropped out among the spectators. There is no reason why a club should tolerate anything of this kind. Toughs who usually are to blame for such disturbances should promptly be ejected from the grounds and kept out.

Fred Fulton, like Jess Willard, has joined out with a circus. His contract is for twenty weeks, calls for $1,000 a week, so he said, and permits Fulton to take Labor day off to fight Willard. The country may not become hysterical over this encounter, but at least it will settle the Hey, Rubel! championship.

While the 1916 track and field season has bordered on the sensational from start to finish, quite the most startling feat was the trick turned at Ann Arbor, Mich., by Landers and Loomis, Oregon (Ill.) high school, who between them scored 34½ points and won one of the biggest track meets of the year. Seventeen schools competed. The Ann Arbor classic has a queer history. Several years ago Cooke, former Cleveland Athletic Club star, then representing Chillicothe (O.) High went up to Ann Arbor and won the meet all by his lonesome.

The New York Yankees are wearing gold and enamel buttons in the form of a shield and bearing the national colors. They have adopted the button as their emblem and also to show that they are preparedness. The club owners gave the buttons.

Mogridge, formerly of the White Sox and now with the Yankees, has scored two shutouts against the Chicago club and three altogether this season. Only one run has been made off him in his last 32 2-3 innings, and that one was not earned.

Curious, how a shift in a player's position, up in the north, can possibly offset the baseball destiny of a player in the far-off Texas league—yet here's how the riddle reads: Up to a few days ago, the Reds were accounting the base ball earth for another outfielder. It seemed a cinch that the club, sooner or later would purchase Dixie Carroll, the great young Shreveport player—but Chase was shifted to the outfield, the need even an extra gardener vanished, with Killifer on deck, ready to go in, and so the idea of grabbing Carroll was forgotten. Wonder if Carroll knows about it, and, if so, what he thinks about the shift of men in Cincinnati that kept him in far-off Shreveport, from climbing higher?

Convicts in the penitentiary at Rockview, Pa., have outfitted four baseball teams with premiums won through saving 32,000 tobacco tags. The four teams are in a league.

The latest white hope is a California giant named Heureux. Let us welcome the newcomer with three cheers: 'Heureux! 'Heureux! 'Heureux!

With the Giants doing a wonderful flip toward the top the only care Muggsy McGraw can mention is the indifferent performances of Jeff Tesreau, who has not managed to show all the class this season that was anticipated. For the past month or more Jeff seems to have been rather listless and an injury to his hand held him back.

Home of Character No. 106

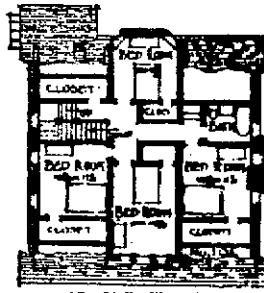

A CEMENT COTTAGE

This is a cement house with walls constructed of hollow tile or brick. The simple treatment of the roof with the pleasing grouping of windows give this house a decidedly homelike effect. The same character, however, would be kept at less expense if wood frame were used, with the walls clapboarded or shingled. The railing indicated on the kitchen porch is composed of 7/8 sawed boards, a departure cheaper than spindles with a great deal more character.

FIRST FLOOR

SECOND FLOOR

The large living room across the front with the entrance hall at one end and an angle-nook with chimney seats at the other, a combined width of 33 feet, and the dining room opening off the center of the living room give a feeling of great space and the effect of an exceedingly large house. The library is accessible from either the dining room or living room with a toilet. Combination stairs lead to the second floor, which contains four bedrooms, a closet for each room, large storage closet and bathroom. One or two bedrooms can be finished off in the attic if desired. Basement under entire house.

Cost $2800. Size 34x27 feet. Can be built for from $3000 to $5000.

Inquiries of Gazette readers addressed to Homes of Character Dept., The Gazette, will be given prompt attention. Always give the number of the home concerning which inquiry is made.

IN THE DINING ROOM OF YOUR NEW HOME

The customary treatment of this room involves the use of a central gas fixture. This may be a semi-indirect gas light, a "shower" or a dome, depending largely on the decorations of the room.

Artistic effectiveness may also be accomplished by the use of gas wall brackets equipped with silk shades.

Convenient gas outlets should be installed for the use of the following gas appliances: Gas Chafing Dish, Tea Samovar, Coffee Percolator, Open Fireplace Grate or Log, Gas Heater or Gassteam Radiator.
